Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

Al-ʿĪsāwī, Rif Dimashq, Syria
[Latitude/Longitude: 32.89645 / 37.31101]
Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

See the commentary in Macdonald, Al Muʾazzin, & Nehmé 1996: 473-476. The stone was rediscovered and photographed by the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme in 1995 and the reading here is made from those photographs. It should be noted that Littmann was working from a hand copy made by one of the servants of the Princeton Expedition, and had not seen the original.

Al-ʿĪsāwī, Rif Dimashq, Syria
[Latitude/Longitude: 32.89645 / 37.31101]
Al-ʿĪsāwī is the name of a probably ancient well between two headlands on the eastern side of the Wādī Shām as it runs northwards from the modern Al-Namārah dam to the Ruḥbah. The well is large, stone lined and with stone water-channels running from it. The main concentration of published inscriptions is on the top of the northern headland, but there also many inscriptions on its south-west slopes, coming down to the well and on the southern headland, on the crest of which is a stone tower. Littmann visited the site twice when he and other members of the expeditions copied some 450 inscriptions. Between 1996 and 2003, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme [SESP] made a comprehensive survey of the site recording over 3500 inscriptions.

l mty bn ʿmm bn ʾḏnt ḏ- (ʾ)l nfr w wtr l- hẓr(f) f h lt hnyt l- ḏ dʿy

By Mty son of ʿmm son of ʾḏnt {of the lineage of} Nfr and he took vengeance for haẓ-Ẓarīf. So, O Lt [grant] good health to him who leaves [this inscription untouched]

Provenance:
Al-ʿIlimmah, Al-Suwaydah, Syria
It appear from de Vogüé's map (1885) that al-ʿIlimmah lies to the west of the Wādī al-Gharz at a point where it rund more or less due north towards the Ruḥbah. Butler describes it as consisting of "seven round hills, collectively called al-ʿIlimmah" (Butler, Norris & Stoever 1930: 26) Unfortunately, we have been unable to identiy the site.

LP 1278.1 see C 5171

Provenance:
Riğm Qaʿqūl, Rif Dimashq, Syria
[Latitude/Longitude: 32.9764 / 37.3136]
The name "Rijm Qaʿqūl" was applied by nineteenth-century travellers to at least four large outcrops at the southern end of the Ruḥba, to the south and south-west of the modern water tower. This helps to explain the curious fact that there is no overlapping between the "Rijm Qaʿqūl" copies of de Vogüé, Wetzstein and Dussaud & Macler, and only in a very few cases between those of de Vogüé and Waddington who were travelling together. The probability that there were multiple cairns with this name is supported by the fact that that while Waddington wrote that it was 10 minutes [ride] from al-ʿUdaysīyah to Riğm Qaʿqūl, Dussaud & Macler say that the journey between the two took 30 minutes. In 1995, the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme identified the sites visited by Wetzstein and by Dusaud & Macler but did not find those where de Vogüé and Waddington had worked. The inscriptions found at Riğm Qaʿqūl "A" were all texts copied by Wetzstein and no one else. It is likely therefore that this is the place he regarded as "Rijm Qaʿqūl". Note that the co-ordinates given here are very approximate.

l ṯrm bn b{n}{n} w ṭhr w ḏbḥ {l-} rḍy w ġnm nqt

By Ṯrm son of {Bnn} and he was purified and he sacrificed to Rḍy and gained as booty a she-camel

Apparatus Criticus:
MA: l ṯrm bn rhṭ w bn[y] w ḏbḥ w rḍy w ġnm nqt "To ṯrm bn Rhṭ who built (married) scarified [sic "sacrificed"?] and was consequently satisfied. He gained a she-camel."

Commentary:
The ed. pr reads the letters in a bizarre order (p. 34). The order suggested here seems more reasonable and produces better sense. On the photograph there are what look like two "n"s or possibly n{y} after the first letter of the second name. The letter before rḍy is unclear even on the stone (MA p. 34) but what is visible looks like a l. In Arabic ṭhr I Form means "become clean" in both a physical and a ritual sense (Lane 1886c) and ġnm I Form of course means "obtain booty". I would take nqt as an adverbial accusative "(in the form of) a she-camel". The authors say that the letters were "scraped on a solid chalky stone with a smooth surface". On the photograph they certainly do not look "scraped" at least in the sense we are using the term.

By {Bhs²} son of {ʾḫzm} son of Wd son of ʿqrb of the lineage of Ġyr

Apparatus Criticus:
MA: khf for {b}hs²

Commentary:
The first letter cannot be a k as read by ed. pr. since there is no cross-stroke nor can it be a l since these are simple straight lines in this text while this letter has a small curve at the very top. B seems the most likely reading cf. the b of bn berfore ʿqrb. The third letter of the name is clearlky a s² not a f. The second leter of the second name is unclear on the photograph which is out-of-focus. The reading ḫ in ed.pr. is just possible has been retained faute de mieux.

And he spent the night with some camels and came to water at Ġdf. And so O Bʿls¹mn [send] dearth to whoever scratches out these inscriptions

Apparatus Criticus:
MA: rġm for rġs¹; byt b- ʾbl w wrd l- ġdf "he lodged his camels for the night and came to the water (the filthy water or he came to the water at night)" (p.38) or "he put up his camels for a night and came to water as soon as the night was lowered" (p. 41)

Commentary:
The edge of the stone at the point where the inscription begins has been obscured on the photograph and there may have been room for more than simply the lām auctoris to have been lost. It is uncertain on the photograph whether the second letter of the first name is a q or a w (cf the w's in line 4). There is a diagonal stroke at the top of the b of the first bn which makes it look like a k. On the photograph this looks deliberate hence the . The g of grm'l has a mark like a cross-stroke within it but this is clearly accidental. The s^1 in the name rġs^{1} could possibly be a ẓ though it is more likely a s^1 and is certainly not a m as read in the ed. pr. The expression wrd l- ġdf might also be interpreted "he came to water for easy living" (cf. Ar. ġadaf "a state of ease or plentifulness" Lane 2233/b) though one would expect h-ġdf in this context. The syntax is easier if ġdf is taken as a place name cf. Wādī al-Ghadaf south of Azraq (Map 1:50 000 sheet K.3353 II approximately 31° 46 N 36° 50 E according to the Official Standard Names Gazetteer). The ed. pr.'s interpretation of the statement is grammatically impossible. A 15 generation genealogy for ʿwḏ is very unusual. See C 2256 for one with the same last 5 generations.

Commentary:
Ed. pr. says that the rock is limestone but it looks more like basalt on the photograph. The second letter of the second name looks very like a l and is quite different from the the r of {n}rn. Cf. SIT 32 where the second letter of the name is a clear l and quite different from b and r in the same text. The first n of nrn is more of a large dot than a line and so the reading is not certain and the inscription clearly continues after the r of the name with a clear n.

Commentary:
There is a chip obscuring most of the second name. Only the beginning of the s¹ is visible the second letter has been destroyed and only part of the third letter remains. The third letter of the fourth name is more similar to the b's of the text than the s^1's as suggested by the author's reading. It is also possible that the curve is an unfinished g or even ʿ. The second letter of the first name after wgm might be a f but it would be a different shape from the other example of that letter in the text and it seems likely that the "middle stroke" is incidental and the letter should be read r. The second letter of the word after the fifth ʿl- is more like a s^1 and the third letter could be a k rather than a h.

Apparatus Criticus:
MDT 2: l ḫlh bn {k}tn bn ms^1[k] p. 113: ltn for ktn.

Commentary:
The reading is very doubtful after the first name. The author has a dot for the first n but it is not legible on the photograph. The first letter of the second name appears to have a loop at one end and might be a ṣ or possibly a ṯ. The crossbar of the following t could be part of a cartouche and it is possible the letter should be read as a n. The next letter is rather far away from the preceding one. There seems to be no justification from either the photograph or copy to restore a k in the third name.

MDT 3: l hʾs^1d bn ṣfwn bn ʾs^1 bn ʾlflḥ

Commentary:
The published photograph is not adequate to check the readings of all the letters. The n of the second bn has been left out in the copy. The first l of the fourth name is not legible in the photograph and in the copy it is drawn as a straight line without a hook. The second l appears to have a hook which is not drawn in the copy. The dotted n's suggest that the script might be Hismaic and it is possible the last letter should be read as a ṭ and the name ʾlflṭ read or possibly ʾflṭ.

Commentary:
The inscription is written around the edge of the rock which is very damaged. The third ʾ in the author's transliteration is a mistake for y which is clear in the copy. The letters read by the author after the second z probably belong to another text which starts below the third m of MDT 4. MDT 4 might continue near the edge of the rock but it is difficult to distinguish any letters because of the abrasions on the rock.

Commentary:
There are traces of letters not read in the edition before the letter read as a g and then the rock is broken. It seems most likely that these letters are not part of MDT 7 but part of another text the beginning of which is lost. It is possible that the letter read as a g is an ʿ.

The ḥ read here is read in the edition as part of MDT 7 but the position and stance of the letter suggests that it belongs to this text which continues either on another face of the rock or on a piece of the rock that has broken off. The shape and stance of the second letter is more like a t than a ḫ. It is possible that the text is Hismaic as the n's are dots and the ḥ is typical of that script.

Commentary:
The above is read as Hismaic. It is difficult to see from the photograph the second n read by MDT as there appears to be only the crossbar of the following t in the arms of the r. There appears to be a n the shape of a dot after the second w. The final letter is read as an ʿ as the arms appear to be enclosed although this is not entirely certain from the photograph. It is difficult to justify the reading of a further n at the end although there is a small chip which might be a letter.

MDT 10: l wrn wt---- "By wrn wt----

Commentary:
MDT read the text in the opposite direction. After the w there are two slightly dotted chips and it is possible that one of them should be read as a n but equally they could both be incidental. The letter after the r has slight abrasions over the top and it is possible that it should be read as a w but it is slightly smaller than the first w. The letter read as a l by MDT has a slight fork at the edge and it seems likely that it is the beginning of the loop of a y that has broken off.

Commentary:
The fourth surviving letter l seems to have been altered to read first y, then ġ, and then r. Similarly, the following letter, n, seems to have been transformed first into a ġ, then a r then a h and finally a ʾ. This is succeeded by a r and the next letter, l seems to have been modified to a d and then a z; and the r + l were then altered to a ṣ and finally a ḍ. The following d has been made into a q, the following l into a h and then a r. This is followed by ym and then n which has been transformed into a ʿ, and ʾ which has been transformed into a ḏ and then with a ʿ carved over it. This is followed by a r which has been made into a ṯ. After this the remaining letters appear to have been left as they were carved. Altogether, the original contained 29 letters comprising all the letters of the Safaitic alphabet except ṣ and w. It is therefore not an abecedary as such, but may have been an exercise. One might speculate that the alterations to the letters in the first half were made by someone trying to show the similaritity in shape between various letters. By {Mʿll} son of Yṯʿt ----

Commentary:
A hammered dot has been added to one end of the second l. The next letter might originally have been a l to which a hammered dot has been added at either end or a y to which one hammered dot has been added. If the latter is the case then the name would read mʿly. By {Mʿlṭ} son of ʾdm son of S[2]dy

Commentary:
Some of the letters have been joined using lines. The initial l is attached to the m and a hammered line which obscures the following ʿ attaches the m to the l. One arm of the first b has been extended and attached to the n. One prong of the ʾ of the second name has been hammered over and the letter has been joined to the following d by further hammering. A horizontal line seems to have been attached to the second n in an attempt to join it to the previous b and there is hammering attaching it to the following s[2]. l ʾfṣy bn ʾs¹d bn s²rk bn rbḥ ḏ- ʾl qmr w kmn mʿ- dd -h ḏ[[l]] l- ʾṯbr

By ʾfṣy son of ʾs¹d son of S²rk son of Rbḥ of the lineage of Qmr and he lay in wait with his paternal uncle {Ḏl} for ʾṯbr

Commentary:
A line has been hammered across the prong of the h of dd -h. After the second ḏ the author wrote a line with a small prong and then seems to have lightly scratched over it to change it into the third l. MKWS 8 is written by ḏl bn s²rk bn rbḥ who would presumably be the paternal uncle referred to. Hava: kamana "to lay hid"; Syr. kemen "lie in wait"; Aph. atbar "to rout" "for a rout" at the end ?

By S¹ḫr son of ʿḏ son of ʿḏ son of Ġṯ and he bought from ʿḏ son of {his} brother the drawing and {blindness} to whoever {scratches [it] out}

Commentary:
Mr.A 6 to 8 are on the same stone. This text is written in large incised letters under the drawing, up the right hand edge of the stone and along the right side of the top. In the sentence w s²ry m- ʿ{ḏ} bn ʾḥ {-h} h- dmyt it may seem unlikely that he bought the drAWING FROM HIS NEPHEW. Littmann suggested that in LP 1166 dmyt might mean "a mare from Dūmā", and certainly Ahmad Al-Jallad (following C.J. Robin) has suggested that in some inscriptions h-dmy could be the nisbah for a man from the oasis of Dūmā (2015: 310). The problem with taking dmyt as "the mare from Dūmā" here is that the horse seems clearly to be a stallion, and unless one takes dmyt as referring to the animal being hunted — the sex of which is not shown — which seems unlikely, one has to fall back on the normal meaning of dmyt "drawing", until another solution can be proposed.

NAID I p. 61: There are further lightly scratched letters. A further s¹ "between" the k/lam auctoris an l between the l and k of mlk a b between the k and b of bn and an n after the first bn. The author has made two errors the g of grmʾl has a tail and there is a l before the m of the third name which is probably the result of metathesis i.e. the author started to write lmk instead of mlk but realised his mistake in time to insert a second l in the correct position.

The third b and n are written as a monogram. The editor reads Ms 68 and 69 as separate texts but suggests that maybe they should be read together. Ed. pr. has been misled by their transcription into treating the first name as gs^{1}m. The first letter cannot possibly be a g and is a clear ġ on both the photograph and their copy. That this is not a simple misprint is shown by their attempts to associate the name with the Arabic root Ï-s-m.

l qdm bn ghm w wrd ʾḍyt h- ʿwḏy bn ṭr{q}

By Qdm son of Ghm and he came to the pool of stagnant water of H-ʿwḏy bn {Ṭrq}

Apparatus Criticus:
MSFS 4: wrd ʾḍyt hʿwḏy bn ṭrd "he goes down to stagnating water of the ʿAwḏite pursued man stayed (there)"

Commentary:
The last letter is not completely clear on the photograph but looks more like a q than a d. For ʾḍyt cf. Ar. aḍāh "a pool of stagnant water" (Groom Dictionary of Arabic topography 32). In view of the fact that it is followed by bn trq it is difficult to see how h-ʿwḏy could mean "the ʿAwḏite". "The ʿwḏite Ibn Ṭrq" would normally be expressed as *bn ṭrq hʿwḏy. On the other hand Hʿwḏ is quite a common PN and it seems possible that h- ʿwḏy could also be used in this way. In what sense this pool was the H-ʿwḏy bn Ṭrq's is not clear. It is unlikely to have been his personal private property and it is more likely that the pool was named after him because of some event there in which he was involved.

Apparatus Criticus:
MSNS 1: and he went down to the stagnating water of the people of the tribe ʿwḏ. O Bʿls^{1}mn [give] relief and peace from enemies MCAM: h- ʿwḏy is the nisbah of ʿwḏ and so means 'the ʿwḏ-ite' [singular]; it cannot be a construct as the first word has the definite article; if h- ʿwḏy is an adj. it needs to be explained why the words do not agree in gender. An explanantion is needed for the occurrence of s^{2}ny rather than s^{2}nʾ.

Commentary:
The copy has a h after the letter ḍ despite the author's reading. From the photograph however it seems likely that the letter should be read as a y.

Commentary:
The script is mixed between Safaitic (see the form of g [if the reading is correct] ḏ, and the r of ds^{2}r) and Hismaic (see the forms of d and ḍ). The word ʿdy seems to have occurred only once before as a verb in SSWS 80 w mr b- ḍf f ʿdy h- ʾs^{1}d f ḫbl rbʿt. According to Lane (1977c), ʿudiya ʿalay-hi can mean "he had his property stolen" and while the phrase lacks the preposition here, it could have a similar meaning, which could be why he was praying for "booty".

l wyb {b}{n} t{q} w mrḥ

By Wyb {son of} {Tq} and he rejoiced greatly

Commentary:
Carefully direct hammered. The b and n of bn are joined. For the meaning of mrḥ compare Classical Arabic mariḥa "he was very joyful and glad" (Lane 2704a).

Provenance:
East of the "Roman road" from al-Namārah to the Ruḥbah, Rif Dimashq, Syria
This is the only site along this track at which we found published inscriptions. Those we sampled here are from the group recorded by Dusaaud & Macler (1901) between the debouchment of Wādī Gharz and al-Namārah (C 2265-2275, but note that 3265-3281 were also recorded on this journey). The "Roman road" would have been the most obvious and direct route between these two points, and the c. 4.5 km from where the road ends on the edge of the Ruḥbah to this site would have been the normal distance covered in the one hour it took them to get from the mouth of Wādī Gharz to the place where they copied the inscriptions. It is therefore possible that they came down this road. The only problem is that they say that the site is on the "right" of the track, whereas coming from the north it would be on the left. Either this is a simple slip, or they were riding parallel, and to the east, of the road. Two of the texts they recorded here (C 2274 and 2275) were also copied by Wetzstein, Waddington and Dunand. The last presumably supplied the provenance quoted in C "on the east side of the Roman road between al-Namārah and the Ruḥbah", since the Dunands must have been in the area at about the time Poidebard identified the road, which had first been noted by von Oppenheim (Poidebard 1928: 118–120, fig.1). Wetzstein gave the provenance as "on the way between al-ʿUdaysiyyah and al-Namārah", to which C adds "not far from al-Namārah". It is therefore probable that Wetzstein would not have been travelling on the "Roman road" but on a track to the east of it, somewhere between it and the modern route between Zalaf and the Ruḥbah water tower. This site is near where he would have had to turn south-west towards al-Namārah. The other texts Wetzstein copied on this journey are C 3223–3248, of which C 3244–3248 were recorded at Ishbikkat al-Namārah since they are identified with copies made at this place by Dussaud & Mascler (1901: 88).

l s^{1}krn bn qdm ḏ- ʾl s^{1}b w ʿly h- ʾfs^{1} l- frs^{1} grmʾl f h lt ḫlft

By S^{1}krn son of Qdm of the lineage of S^{1}b and he raised the memorials to Cavalryman Grmʾl and so O Lt [may he have] a successor

Commentary:
This text is incised and runs boustrophedon. The author omitted the s¹ of frs¹ but squeezed it in between the r and the next letter. This small site (NRW.D) seems to have been the grave or some form of memorial to f*rs¹ grm'l* since several texts there mention him. This would be the first time a "double name" of this sort had been found in Safaitic, and it is more likely that frs¹ here is a title (i.e. "cavalryman") thus "Cavalryman Grm'l". While, in this case, one might expect either *grm'l h-frs¹ or *h-frs¹ grm'l, compare mlk 'grfṣ in Is.H 763 (=LP 1064+1065) as opposed to h-mlk grfṣ in KRS 1023, 1039 and Al-Namārah.H 91.

Provenance:
Unnamed site west of the "Roman road" from al-Namārah to the Ruḥbah. Clearly the burial place of frs¹ grm'l, unspecified region, unspecified country.

Commentary:
The g's in this text are circles with an additional curve attached so that they look like unfinished w's. The additional curve in the second g might have been added in order to join the letter to the following m. The additional curve in the first g however does not attach the letter to another one. The ḥ of the name after ʿl is written above the the line of the text and was presumably added later by the inscriber of the text. Below it is a horizontal line which might have been the start of his initial attempt to add the letter which he abandonned because he thought there was not room to complete it.

Commentary:
Only parts of the reading can be checked from the photograph which is very dark and virtually illegible. The uncertainties in the SD reading reflect the quality of the photograph rather than what it is probably possible to read from the stone. The form of some of the letters in the last part of the text in the NSR and JaS copies suggest that their readings are not correct. In NSR the d in dṯ' is of a radically different form to the other d's in the text and in JaS the ḥ of ṣdḥ is larger and more square than the other ḥ of the text. JaS is correct in reading further letters on the stone see NSR 11.2 and 11.3.

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: The text is not read in NSR. JaS 68.3: l dḫs rbd "By Dḫs. He has stayed [here]".

Commentary:
The interpretation of these letters is doubtful. The sign read as {ʿ} is interpreted by JaS as a sun with rays but it is more likely that the "rays" are abrasions made by direct hammering. The last first three letters are directly hammered and the last three are incised on to the rock. It is doubtful that the signs read as l d and ḫ by JaS are letters.

l mnʿm bn ġnm bn mnʿm w qṣṣ ʿr {ʾ}l ybġy ḥwlt dgnt

By Mnʿm son of Ġnm son of Mnʿm and the chief of the ʾl Ybġy took revenge on the Ḥwlt whilst they remained

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: ʿrṣ---ḥwlt--- for ʿr {ʾ}l ybġy ḥwlt dgnt. HST p. 9: w qṣṣ ʿrṣ??---ḥwlt for the last part. JaS 88: w qṣṣ ʿr ṣly bfyḥ wlt s[1]gnt "And ʿr has narrated deceiving about the abundance of herbage. And Lt imprisonment". JMAA III p.113: read as JaS 88. H unp.: or ---ḥ wlt--- for the last part.

Commentary:
The twenty third letter has been read by previous editors as ṣ. It is however clear from the photograph that the original letter was an ʾ and that the circle was added later. If it was added to change the letter into a ṣ then it was a strange way to make the alteration as a more usual form of the letter could have been produced by closing one of the forks of the ʾ. It is possible the circle is an ʿ which was missed out and added later or as has been read here that it is extraneous to the text. There are other letters written next to the letters of the text that are clearly not part of the text: a b written next to the m of the first name; two slightly wavy lines next to the n of ġnm; two m's in which the outlines are incomplete on either side of the sixteenth letter; possibly an incomplete ʿ next to the q and the first ṣ of qṣṣ; a q with a hooked line attached next to the l of ʾl and a n next to the second ġ. Some of the letters have been embellished the circles of the y's have been hammered in and the lines of the second t have been given hooks turning it into a swastika shape. There are also incised lines on the surface of a lighter patina some of which are wusºm. For ʿr cf. Arabic ʿayr - "lord chief" and for dgnt cf. Arabic dajana bi-l-makān - "he remained dwelt in the place". The lineal name Ybġy is new although it is attested as a personal name in WH 231.

l bkr bn ġṯ bn nġ{b} w dṯʾ {b}n{h}

By Bkr son of Ġṯ son of {Nġb} and he spent the season of the later rains {b}n{h}

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: s^2ġr for nġb and bns^1 for bnh. w dṯʾ bns^1 "wa irtabaʿa bi-n¡s". N¡s is either the name of a place or a period of time. H unp.: s^2 cannot be read in the second name and the last letter of the name is b. Read bnh for bns^1 at the end.

Commentary:
It is difficult to be certain of the distiguishing features of the b's and r's of the text although the former seem to be more rounded. The interpretation of the end of the text is uncertain. What has been read as {h} at the end is of a light patina than the other letters of the text and it is possible that it is a later addition and the end should read bn.

Commentary:
It is unlikely that the letters hṣy are to be read at the end as suggested by H because of their position on the rock. If they were a continuation there is no apparent reason why the inscriber could not have continued after the s¹ of bʾs¹. It is possible they should be read after s²rt and were written to the side because they were originally left out. By {Gs²m} son of Mlk son of Dgg son of {Ynh} and he pastured

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: gs²m for {g}{s²}m yny for yn{h} and rʿy for rʿ{y}. H unp.: [g]{s²}m for gs²m.

Commentary:
The second letter is hammered over and only part of the third is legible. The reading of the third letter of the fourth name is very doubtful. There seems to be a line with a fork one of the prongs of which is rather long and slightly curved. The w r and ʿ at the end are partly covered by later hammering.

l nb{s¹} bn ṭ{q}lt

By {Nbs¹} son of Ṭ{q}lt

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: l nbs² bn ṭylt H unp.: nb{s²} for nbs²

Commentary:
The third letter is two lines joined together at one end with very little space between the srms. The vertical slightly squiggly line which was read as s² by NSR and H does not seem to be as definite as the rest. The second letter of the second name has a downward stroke which is not as long as the other one and which is partly covered by a chip. There is possibly an s¹ in a lighter patina above the first b.

l ʿm{r} bn m{r}{n} bn m{r}n w ḥll

By ʿm{r} son of {Mrn} son of {Mrn} and he stopped [there]

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: ʿmr for ʿm{r} and mġn for the second and third names.

Commentary:
The first r is partially covered by subsequent hammer marks. There is a dot after the r of the second name which is a different colour and might be part of later damage. The second letter of the third name might be a ġ as in NSR but the upper part of the zig-zag is a lighter colour. There is no lower arm to the letter.

l r{ḍ} bn s¹lm

By {Rḍ} son of S¹lm

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: rḍ for r{ḍ}. H unpub.: possibly bdl for rḍ

Commentary:
There are two lines after the r of the first name and there is short dash protruding from the first one. It is not as deep as the other lines of the letters of the text but it might be intentional and might be either the cross-bar of a ḍ as suggested by NSR or the dash of a d as suggested by H. There is a line and a circle beyond the end of the text which might be a l and a g or a wasm.

l {s¹}ʿd bn ----

By {s¹}ʿd son of ----

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: l s¹ʿd bn --

Commentary:
It is likely this is practice text or written by someone who was unfamiliar with the alphabet. There is a dot between the first and second letter but it is probably a stray hammer mark. The s¹ is in the shape of a V facing vertically in which the two lines are incompetently joined. The d seems to have been formed by inscribing a vertical and a horizontal stroke first which have then been clumsily joined together to form a loop. There are three hammered dots below the bn and then some larger hammered marks which were probably an attempt to continue the text.

The ʿ is close to the edge of the stone and there is only room for one letter before which would probably be l. The first b is written at 90° and facing in the opposite direction to that faced by the {ẓ}. The first letter of the third name is obliterated by hammering.

l {b}rdt [b][n] gs[2]{m}----

By {Brdt} {son of} {Gs^{2}m}----

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: l brdt bn gs^{2}m bn ḥrm JaS 132.2 first part: l brdt bn gs^{2}m bn ḥrwz. The second part of NSR 53.2 is read as a continuation. H unp.: possibly srdt for brdt; the rest of the text is extremely doubtful.

Commentary:
From the angle of the photograph it is difficult to be sure whether the second letter has a tail and should be read as an s^1 as suggested by H. JaS has read the second part of NSR 53.2 as a continuation of this text. It is impossible to check this from the photograph as the letters have been obliterated by subsequent abrasions.

Commentary:
The ḍ is two concentric circles. It is difficult to tell without a context whether the letter after mn is a g or ʿ. It is smaller than the other g in the text about the same size as one of the ʿ's and larger than the other one. Part of the following letter has chipped away and insufficient remains to be sure of how it should be read although either r or d as suggested by previous editors would be possible. {l}{n} s¹lm f bbs²s¹ry

{l}{n} S¹lm f bbs²s¹ry

Commentary:

The form of the {l}{n} read at the beginning are clear but it is not certain that they belong to the text as they are written to one side. Also if the first letter is a l it does not have a hook as does the l in s^1lm. The s^2 is a zig-zag and the r is distinguished from the b by being a small rounded curve. It is possible that y read at the end should be read at the of NSR 61.4. It is unlikely that the text is a continuation of either NSR 61.1 or NSR 61.2 as the letters are inscribed in a different technique to those of the other texts.

NSR 64.2

l ʿqrb w rʿy w mṭr w dṯ'

By ʿqrb and he pastured and it rained and he spent the season of the later rains

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: l ʿqrb w rʿy. H unp.: could be read with NSR 64.1.

Commentary:
Read with NSR 64.1. The second w is not read by NSR although it occurs in the copy. The line read as l before mṭr is almost certainly extraneous as the hammer marks are inconsistent and not as deep as the others in text. There are two curves facing the opposite directions after the ' at the end. They are possibly an unfinished letter or a wasm.

l ḫlṣ bn mġyr bn ḥwt bn s²h{r} w [ ] wḥd w ṣwy f h lt w ds²r {s¹}lm w s²kr

By Ḫlṣ son of Mġyr son of ḥwt son of {s²hr} and [ ] he was alone and built a cairn and so O Lt and Ds²r {[grant] security} and w S²kr

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: s²hr for s²h{r}; s¹lm for {s¹}lm. H unp.: possibly fḫ for s²hr; there is a gap between w which is doubtful reading and wḥd.

Commentary:
The arms of the {r} of the fourth name are joined at an acute angle and the letter is written on the edge of the rock. The stone is broken between the second w and the w of wḥd. If the break was there when the text was inscribed then the inscriber continued on another edge rather than turning towards the centre of the rock which he could have done. If the break has occurred subsequently there are several letters missing between w and wḥd.

Commentary:
The first letter has a line joining the vertical stroke to form a h. It is not a deep as the rest of the letter but is probably intentional. There is a chip in the rock after the h and it is possible that NSR and H are justified in reading a n. The first s² is inscribed near the top of the stroke of the following h. The ʿ of {ʿ}n is larger than the other ʿ of the text. It is possible it should be read as m although it is not as elongated as the other m's. There is a chip between the n and d of ndm.

The ḍ is two concentric circles. There is a gap between the d and ṯ of the second name. The letters after the second m are on the edge of the rock only a line with a circle is visible and it is impossible to check whether it is a y ṣ or ṯ. Commentary:
Several letters of the text have been infilled and hammered over either by the author of the text or subsequently and the text is partly covered by abrasions. It is unlikely that the second letter is an ʿ as read by NSR but it could be a z as part of a cross-bar at the top of a horizontal stroke is visible. The second letter of the second name could be a r or a b it is slightly more square than the b's of the text. It is possible that bn has been left out between this name and ʿbd. Part of the b of ʿbd is destroyed by a chip and the d is written on its side. The following b is written right up against the g and no n is visible. If the third letter of gf{f}t is to be read as f then it is facing in the other direction to the other f. The b of the following bn has been hammered over and its original shape is not visible. Commentary:
The letters after f are inscribed on a different line to the previous ones and it is possible they should be read as a separate text although it is difficult to identify any letters before them on the same line. Commentary:
The letters read by NSR after the second name belong to NSR 81.1. The continuation of the text as read here is written on the other side and is not read by NSR. Several of the letters are covered by lichen which makes the reading difficult. The y of the first name is written below the m. Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: the first five names are read as a separate text NSR 98.1 and the rest of the genealogy and ḥll and the following 2 letters are read in NSR 89.2 as: bn ḥdd bn ʿmr bn ms¹k bn ʿm bn bnds¹ bn fhr bn ʾṣr w ḥll w g[ls¹]; w g[ls¹]" wa-ja[lasa] (atæ najdan). H unp.: read bn ms²rh after the second occurrence of bdt; NSR 89.2 is a continuation of the text and ʿmrn bn ds¹ bn {f}hr bn {ʾ}{ṣ}r should be read for ʿm bn bnds¹ bn fhr bn ʾṣr. The text continues after g[ls¹].

Commentary:
The seventh name is difficult to explain but the{s²} and {s¹} are fairly clear. It is possible the last letter of the name is a k. The n in the nineth name is doubtful as it is very faint. After the bn following the name ds there is an ʾ. The letter and next part of the rock have been covered by incised lines as though an attempt has been made to cross-out a mistake. It is likely that the author started to write the thirteenth name and then remembered he had forgotten to write the name fhrn and so covered his mistake with lines and continued the text slightly to the side of the previous part. The first letter of the thirteenth name is slightly covered by hammer marks. There is a small curve to one side of the letter which does not seem to be attached. The {b} of the name appears to have a tail in some lights which probably led NSR to read ṣ lying on its side at this point. The ʿ is the circle of the letter read by NSR the {b} read here the fork and the two are joined by the apparent tail. The ḍ is two concentric circles. Parts of the rock following it are covered by lichen and it unclear whether the rest of the letters are a continuation of this text or part of another one.

NSR: l ḥzmt bn rwṯ bn bgrt bn grm bn tmn w dṯʾ. H unp.: ḥ{z}mt for ḥzmt; possibly rgʾ for rwṯ; ʾmn or ḫmn for tmn.

Commentary:
The second letter of the first name is damaged by abrasions but is possible to see traces of a vertical stroke and a cross-bar at the top suggesting the letter should be read as z. It is difficult to be certain as to whether the circle of the second letter of the second name has a line across it or a dot in the middle. If the latter is the case then the letter should be read as either a ʿ or ḍ [REF]. The first letter of the fifth name does not have a central line between the two forks and it is possible that H is correct in reading the letter as ḫ. It is possible the second letter of the same name should be read as a f as the spine which would form a m is covered by a subsequent hammer mark and might be extraneous to the reading of the letter.

l ṯ---- m{ṣ}ry bn ḥyn bn wd bn ʿṭs¹ bn frhz w wgm ʿl- ʾnʿ{m} [w] dṯʾ

By Ṯ---- {Mṣry} son of Ḥyn son of Wd son of ʿṭs¹ son of Frhz and he grieved for {ʾnʿm} and he spent the season of the later rains

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: l mṣry at the beginning; ʾnʿm w dṯʾ for ʾnʿ{m} [w] dṯʾ. H unp.: ʾn{ʿ}{m} [w] dṯʾ for ʾnʿm w dṯʾ.

Commentary:
The reading of the l and ṯ is clear but there are then hammer marks which obscure the letters before the m. The fork of the ṣ is obscured by abrasions as are part of the m of ʾnʿm and the w before dṯʾ.

Provenance:

By ʿqrb son of Thnʾ son of {Gmhr} {and} {he grieved} for his mother and for Hnʾlh and for ----ʿ---- {and} {for} Ḫlf and for Tmds²r

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: g[ṣ]ʾr for g{m}hr; w wgm for [w] w[g]m; w ʿl repeated by mistake for ----ʿ---- [w] [ʿ][l-]. H unp.: the two pieces of the rock do not fit together and it is possible a part is missing. The second occurrence of w ʿl after hnʾlh is doubtful and so is the f of ḫlf. The end reads tmd f s---

Commentary:
H is correct in pointing out that the two parts of the rock do not fit together. It is still possible that the second letter of third name is a m although it is impossible to be certain without knowing how the two bits of the rock actually join together. The first w and g of w wgm have been hammered over. After w ʿl following hnʾlh there is definitely an ʿ and possibly a letter before it. The surface of the rock where there might have been further letters is hammered. On the adjoining piece of rock there are traces of what might be an ʿ before the l. It is possible that the letters read in NSR 95.2 are a continuation of this text.

----s^2dd {b}{n} ----

Commentary:
The surface before {s^2} is covered by hammer marks. The letters that have been read as {b} and {n} are carelessly hammered compared to the other letters which are neatly inscribed. It is possible that this text should be read as a continuation of NSR 95.1.

l ----m{s²}t w s¹nn {w}----{b}lt w {z}by w ṯwr w {ẓ}mn w dṯ{ʾ}

By ----m{s²}t w S¹nn {w}----{b}lt w {z}by w ṯwr w {ẓ}mn and {he spent the season of the later rains}

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: w wd w lt w ġry for {w}----{b}lt w {z}by; suggests that wd lt ġry ṯwr and perhaps s¹nn and hmn are names of deities. H unp.: the reading w wd w lt is very doubtful; read zry for ġry. The words after the author's name are probably verbs.

Commentary:
The second letter and the surface between the final n of s¹nn and the letters lt are covered by lichen and it is difficult to distinguish anything. The fourth letter might be a f rather than s². In some lights the cross-bar of the letter read as {z} does not appear to be complete. The letters read as b are larger curves than that read as r. The latter might have a small tail in which case it should be read as a s¹. The letter read as ẓ is a small curve with a vertical stance. There are possibly further letters on another part of the rock.

Apparatus Criticus:
NSR: l zhmn bn ṯkm bn ʿm bn ḍhlt w bny.

Commentary:
The h is restored in the first name on the basis of the names occurring in NSR 102. The last letter of the fourth name is partly covered by hammering. Commentary:
There is lichen and abrasions over the first part of the text and it is possible that ṣ should be read but nothing else is legible from the photograph. The ḥ of the second name is an unusual shape and different from the shape of the other ḥ in the text. A fork has been inscribed and then the third middle line has been attached to a line of the fork rather than to the centre. The n of the second bn is inscribed on the edge of another letter possibly a r in thicker chiselled lines which is followed by a ḥ. The different technique of inscribing and the postion of the n suggest that these letters are another text NSR 111.2 rather than a part of this one. Apparatus Criticus:
QSZB 1: w ḫbl h- trḥ for w ḫbl -h tr; "and the grief-stricken man last his mind" for "and may the one {who would efface} it [the inscription] perish"

Commentary:
Given the angle of the photograph, the letter read as {b} in ḫ{b}l is not entirely certain. The final formula is similar to that in KRS 941 {w} {q}l ḫbl -h trḥ which Al-Jallad translates "and he {said} may the one who would efface it [the inscription] perish" (2015: 9, 180, 267-258).

Apparatus Criticus:

QSZB 8: hṣlh for hn'h; ḏʿmr for tʿmr

Commentary:
The photograph is far from clear in places but the reading offered here seems plausible. Many of the letters have "square" forms. Where QSZB read ṣ there seems to be a clear ', and they give no explanation of why, in the last name, they read as ḏ a sign which in their tracing appears like a ṭ. In fact, there is not room for the sign in their tracing and a ṭ can be seen clearly. The name hn'h is found in Dadanitic (see HE 75 and QṢ unp 3 and 5).

This text was not recorded by Dussaud and Macler and so not published in C, It was recorded by the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme in 1995. QWs 8 is at the top of the boulder and starts above the beginning of QWs 4. It is incised boustrophedon in small letters which, in places, do not show up clearly against the rock, making it difficult to obtain a coherent reading. It would be tempting to read the name following whbl as gnʾl, since this occurs at the top of the genealogies of both the Ḍf and ʿwḏ lineage groups. However, it is clear that the name is gll.

Commentary:
C 4043–4046 (= QWs 3, 5+6, 11) and QWs 4, 7–10 are on a long low boulder with a dark red, shiny surface. This text was not recorded by Dussaud and Macler and so not published in C, It was recorded by the Safaitic Epigraphic Survey Programme in 1995. This text begins immediately to the right of 4. It is lightly incised and the letters are patinated to the same colour as the surrounding rock. In places it is difficult to make out. The corner of the rock-face has been chipped off. The same author gives the same genealogy in SESP.S 1, where he includes the kn after s²ʿr which he omitted here, compare the same section of the Ḍf genealogy in KRS 258, 883, 1732, Is.Mu 121, etc.

---- from the Romans {and so} ----

Commentary:
C 4039–4042 (+ QWs 13–15, 17) and QWs 16 are carved on a long low rock with a deep mauve shiny surface. QWs 16, which was not copied by Dussaud and Macler, runs downwards from the junction of the end of C 4039 and the beginning of C 4040 and then turns to the right to run horizontally along the bottom of the face before turning upwards again to end by the middle of C 4040. Most of it is barely visible on the photographs and a small part seems to have been lost in the area of the face which has disappeared.

Commentary:
The reading is from a hand-copy made by Dr Farouk Al-Rawi. The reading until the first ṣ is fairly certain but after the ṣ the copy is incomplete and it is doubtful whether the next part is a continuation of the same inscription or part of another one. The letter after the word dd has a loop at one end although it seems most likely that this belongs to another letter which would be a ṯ. The letter before the second s[2] is doubtful and there is room after the letters bn for another letter although there is no indication of this on the copy. The eighth ʿ has a crossbar but it seems likely that it is an inaccurate copy. The second prong of the final name is uncertain and it is possible the letter is a h. It is uncertain that the last two letters should be read as r's.

The reading is from a hand-copy made by Dr Farouk Al-Rawi. It is possible the letter read as the first y is a q. There is also quite a wide gap between the first letter of the name and the ʿ. It is possible the inscription continues after the word s¹lm but the copy is unclear except for a h and l on the other side of some letters of RaIM 78130.2.

Commentary:
The reading is from a hand-copy made by Dr Farouk Al-Rawi. The rock is broken and it is difficult to make sense of some parts of the copy. The first legible letter has a slight tail. Part of the letter read as the third g has broken off and there is possibly a letter between it and the following ḥ. The next two letters read as n are possibly incidental as they are not rounded, unlike the n before the ġ. The letter read as the first m might be a r followed by a f in which case the text after b{n} should be read as wtr f nġm.

Commentary:
The reading is from a hand-copy made by Dr Farouk Al-Rawi. The second letter is damaged and it is possible it should be read as a h. There is a dot in the copy after the first ʿ and it is possible that the name should be read as ʿnṯgt. However such a name would be very difficult to explain and it seems likely that the dot is a copyist's mistake. 'tm here is explained on the basis of Classical Arabic ma'tam "a place of assembling in a case of rejoicing or mourning" (Lane 13c–14a).

l ġṯ bn ms¹k bn ḫrg bn ḥt w s²ry h- frs¹ m- mlk b- ʿs²rn mny

By Ġṯ son of Ms¹k son of Ḫrg son of Ḥt and he bought the horse from Mlk for twenty minas

Commentary:
The text is written in large incised letters around the drawing. There is a clear distinction between b and r in this text, except it seems and the first word of the narrative which looks like s²by where the sense demands s²ry "he bought". The only other record in the Safaitic graffiti of the purchase of a horse (this time for five minas) is C 3916.

Provenance:
Riǧm Qaʿqūl A, Rif Dimašq, Syria
"Rijm Qaʿqūl A" is about 900 m to the south-east of the Ruḥbah water tower, on the right bank of Wādī Shām before it arrives in the Ruḥbah. It is a large cairn with a few ruined houses and very few inscriptions.
The name "Riǧm Qaʿqūl" was applied by nineteenth-century visitors to at least four large outcrops at the southern end of the Ruḥbah, to the south and south-west of the modern water tower. This helps to explain the curious fact that there is no overlapping between the "Riǧm Qaʿqūl" copies of de Vogüé (de Vogüé 1868–1877: nos. 212–215, 217, 219–224, 226–234, 389) and Waddington (de Vogüé 1868–1877: nos. 235–253, 388, 390–393, 397–400), Wetzstein (1860: nos 41–48, and at "a mound 10 minutes from Riǧm Qaʿqūl", nos 68–88) and Dussaud/ Macler (1903: nos 30–51, 53–124), and only in a very few cases between those of de Vogüé and Waddington. We only identified the site visited by Wetzstein (Riǧm Qaʿqūl A) and by but have not yet found those where de Vogüé /Waddington and Dusaud/Macler worked. The inscriptions we found at Riğm Qaʿqūl A were all texts copied by Wetzstein and no one else. It is likely therefore that this is the place he regarded as "Riğm Qaʿqūl".

"Rijm Qaʿqūl A" is about 900 m to the south-east of the Ruḥbah water tower, on the right bank of Wādī Shām before it arrives in the Ruḥbah. It is a large cairn with a few ruined houses and very few inscriptions.
The name "Riğm Qaʿqūl" was applied by nineteenth-century visitors to at least four large outcrops at the southern end of the Ruḥbah, to the south and south-west of the modern water tower. This helps to explain the curious fact that there is no overlapping between the "Riğm Qaʿqūl" copies of de Vogüé (de Vogüé 1868–1877: nos. 212–215, 217, 219–224, 226–234, 389) and Waddington (de Vogüé 1868–1877: nos. 235–253, 388, 390–393, 397–400), Wetzstein (1860: nos 41–48, and at "a mound 10 minutes from Riğm Qaʿqūl", nos 68–88) and Dussaud/ Macler (1903: nos 30–51, 53–124), and only in a very few cases between those of de Vogüé and Waddington. We only identified the site visited by Wetzstein (Riğm Qaʿqūl A) and by but have not yet found those where de Vogüé /Waddington and Dusaud/Macler worked. The inscriptions we found at Riğm Qaʿqūl A were all texts copied by Wetzstein and no one else. It is likely therefore that this is the place he regarded as "Riğm Qaʿqūl".

By Ms[1]k son of {Ḥd} son of S[1]ḫr son of Ḥd son of Mḥrb of the lineage of {Frṯ} and he served [in an army unit] under the possessor of authority {the year} Bnḫr ʾml---- l mṣy with {ten} {archers} and with two hundred horsemen.

Commentary:
The text is carved in a semi-square version of the script around a small drawing. Parts of the text are badly abraded. The first ḥd has a stray line, thicker than the letter, in the ḥ, and a crescent, again in thicker lines, above the d. A second w was carved before s¹rt but was then cancelled with three lines crossing it. The h- before s¹lṭn was originally carved as a ʾ and its lower fork was then scratched over. Unfortunately, the letters after bnḫr are extremely difficult to interpret and it can be seen on the photographs that the letter which was read as k in our initial reading, followed by Al-Jallad (2015: 276), is of a completely different shape to the other examples in the text and both this letter and the one before it have been damaged. It should also be noted that Al-Jallad's reading (2015: 276) omits the letters lmṣy after the supposed ʾml{k}. The expression s¹rt ʿl- occurs in two other Safaitic inscriptions, in one, KRS 1024, we find s¹rt ʿ{l-} ḫr hdy which we have translated "he served {under} Ḫr the commander", literally "he served, Ḫr being commander", compare Arabic ʿalay-hi amrun "command lies upon him, he is in command" (Lane 2145a and see Macdonald 2014:160, n. 78). The other occurrence is in C 2076: s¹rt ʿl- {ḥ}dd ʾbgr b- ʾlf rgl w mʾt f [r]s¹ "he served [in an army unit] on [literally against] the borders of ʾbgr with a thousand foot soldiers and a hundred horsemen" (see Macdonald 2014:160, n. 78). In the present text we follow Al-Jallad's translation (2015: 149), rather than those proposed in Macdonald 2014:160, n. 78. The end of the inscription, b- {ʿ}{s}²r [r]mʾn w b- mʾty frs¹, appears clear despite the two damaged letters in ʿs²r. These were previously thought to be the letters ʿz and it was suggested that they may have been used as numbers (Al-Jallad 2015: 93–94). However, it now seems more likely that they are part of the word ʿs²r and that the [r] of the following word, rmʾn, assimilated to the [r] of ʿs²r. Al-Jallad has explained rmʾn as derived from rmy "archers" or "lancers" (2015: 339). On mʾty see Al-Jallad 2015: 37.

By ʾnʿm son of Mġny son of Wḥs² son of Wʿl and he grieved in pain for his immediate family many of whom were lost

Commentary:
See the commentary to 3. This text is lightly scratched and written boustrophedon. Note the curious form of the ḥ in wḥs², which looks more like a ḏ. There is an extraneous scratch, which is lighter and thinner than the lines which make up the letters running from the ʿ of ngʿ and across the g, making the ʿ look at first sight like a y. In view of the gender of ḏll, bt presumably represents bayt "immediate family, tent-group" rather than bint "daughter". The passage ḏll mn- gm -h would seem to mean literally "lost from much of it", that is "much of which was lost". The passive participle ḏll is used in Safaitic both of those who are lost and of those who are dead and it is not possible in this context to say which is intended here. For gm compare Arabic ǧamm "many, much" (Lane 449a).

"Rijm Qaʿqūl D" is a low outcrop with cairns and ruined structures about 100 metres south. of the water tower at the Ruḥbà. None of the inscriptions found here had been published.
The name "Riǧm Qaʿqūl" was applied by nineteenth-century visitors to at least four large outcrops at the southern end of the Ruḥbah, to the south and south-west of the modern water tower. This helps to explain the curious fact that there is no overlapping between the "Riǧm Qaʿqūl" copies of de Vogüé (de Vogüé 1868–1877: nos. 212–215, 217, 219–224, 226–234, 389) and Waddington (de Vogüé 1868–1877: nos. 235–253, 388, 390–393, 397–400), Wetzstein (1860: nos 41–48, and at "a mound 10 minutes from Riǧm Qaʿqūl", nos 68–88) and Dussaud/ Macler (1903: nos 30–51, 53–124), and only in a very few cases between those of de Vogüé and Waddington. The translation is that in Al-Jallad 2015: 276.

Provenance:
Riğm al-Ruṣayʿī, Site 21, Al-Suwaydah, Syria
Site 21 is a large cairn with many inscriptions of which Littmann copied only 5. It is c. 1.75 km, as the crow flies, from Biʾr al-Ruṣayʿī, around which there are many cairns, and it is not clear why this one was given the name Riğm al-Ruṣayʿī. The local Bedouin do not appear to know it as this today. Two texts from this site are clearly identifiable as LP 169 and 170 respectively, and another as LP 174, all from Rijm Ruṣayʿī.

By {Ḥny} son of Ys¹lm son of {ʿwḏn} son of Mlk and he camped here the year the lineage of ʾbgr fled from S¹dr and {the driving out} of the Jews and so O Bʿls¹mn [grant] deliverance from misfortune and safety

Apparatus Criticus:
RmNSWQ 191: l ḥy bn ys^{1}lm bn gḏl bn mlk w ḥll h- dr s^{1}nt.....

Commentary:
The inscription runs over five faces of the rock. Comparison with other inscriptions which contain the part of this genealogy after the first name show that the third name must be ʿwḏn despite the large and misshapen ʿ. The n can be seen on the photograph, just after the ḏ. The interpretation of the passage read as w ḫw{ʾ} {ʾ}l yhd is suggested tentatively and is not a secure basis for historical speculation! The letter read as the first ʾ has been converted from a b and so has a curved form, while the letter read as the second ʾ looks more like a ṯ, and to read it as ʾ one would have to assume that the prongs of the forks at each end had been joined. The word ḫw{ʾ} has been explained from the infinitive (ḫawāʾ) of the Arabic verb ḫawā "to become devoid of inhabitants, unoccupied" used of houses or places (Lane 827b). The word gly occurs in two other Safaitic inscriptions (Ali Hajaj 22 and AbaNS 881). It has been interpreted on the basis of Arabic ǧalā "to emigrate, flee, be dispersed from one's abode through fea or famine" (Lane 446c). The ʾl ʾbgr may possibly be the people of Edessa which had a series of kings of this name, see Macdonald 2014: 160, n. 78.

SAMAS 9.42.2

l mʿn bn ḫlf bn ml{k}y w wgm ʿl- khln

By Mʿn son of Ḫlf son of {Mlky} and he grieved for Khln

Commentary:
The third name is rather uncertain. It is possible that the second letter is a l running into a k. Alternatively, the second letter might be a ġ with a following short line attached to its curve, in which case the name could be read as mġny. The problem with the latter suggestion is that the other examples of n in the text are dots. It is unclear whether the statement of grieving should be read here or with SAMAS 9.42.1. It is written more carefully than the letters of either SAMAS 9.42.1 or 2.

l {ṣ}bḥ bn ḥy bn ẖdmt bn ġzyt bn ʿbd bn mlk

By {Ṣbḥ} son of Ḥy son of Ḫdmt son of Ġzyt son of ʿbd son of Mlk

Commentary:
See the commentary to SESP.D 1. SESP.D 3 is written in lightly incised letters just below SESP.D 2. The author omitted the bn ʿ after ġzyt and added them just below the line. The ʿ was then used by someone else to carve the name ʿbdm (SESP.D 3.1) below ġzyt.

Provenance:
Unnamed, Rif Dimašq, Syria
On the right bank of the Wādī al-Shām approximately 400 m north-east of the barrage of the Namārah dam, on the first promontory downstream of the barrage. There are several Bedouin tombs on the summit.

Commentary:
SESP.M 1 is on the much abraded face of a large stone, over which a 9-Men's Morris has been heavily incised along with other scratches. Immediately after the m of the second name there is a mark which at first sight looks like an uncompleted ʾ, but is an extraneous mark. The fifth letter before the end is written over another, extraneous stroke which makes it look like a ḫ. The antepenultimate letter is a clear ʾ not a ḫ.

Commentary:
See Macdonald, Al Muazzin & Nehmé 1996: 453-458, where this is number D. The penultimate tribal name was read there as frṯ, but it seems more likely that it is s²rṯ (compare the f before ḥrb and the s² of h- ʿbs²y). At 16 generations, this is one of the longest Ḍf genealogies, but see SESP.S 2 and see the family-tree in Macdonald, Al Muʾazzin & Nehmé 1996: 455. The same author gave his genealogy in QWs 9.

Provenance:
Unnamed, Al-Suweidah, Syria
At 21.3 km east of Rushayda and at 7.5 km west of Biʾr al-Ruṣayʿī, the Rushaydah-Zalaf road crosses a small tributary of Wādī al-Shām called by the local Bedouins Umm al-Ǧathādir (its confluence with Wādī al-Shām is 1.5 km to the north-east). Site SESP.S is approximately 200 m north-north-east of site SESP.U on the same (right) bank of Umm al-Ǧathādir. Commentary:
As in SESP.S 1, the genealogy here has 16 generations but shows a rather distant branch of the tribal genealogy from that in SESP.1. SESP.S 2–4 are by three brothers. SESP.2–4 demonstrate two of the three methods of marking affiliation to a social group. In SESP 2 this is done by tracing the author's lineage to the eponymous ancestor of his group, while the authors of SESP.S 3 and 4 use the expression ḏ- ʾl ("he of the lineage of") plus the group's name. These three inscriptions show that the ʾl Kn was a sub-group of the ʾl ḏf. Although the last letter of the sixth name is much longer than the first and looks like a l, comparison with the other kn genealogies shows that the name must be nʿmn. After the second nʿmn there are six letters which have been scratched over so effectively that it is difficult to work out what they were. For the interpretation of dʿy see Al-Jallad 2015: 309 and for the interpretation of nqʾt see Al-Jallad 2015: 335.

Commentary:
SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. This text starts at the top of the vertical face but runs onto an adjacent face and then back onto the vertical face to end up just to the right of the drawing of a camel. The author carved a m before the second name and does not seem to have erased it, but it would produce an impossible name. He also omitted the s^{2} in ms^{2}ʿr and added it below the line.

Provenance:

SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. This text starts just below the beginning of SESP.S 5 and runs parallel with it down the right-hand side of the face, with the last two letters on the adjoining face. At 21.3 km east of Rushayda and at 7.5 km west of Biʾr al-Ruṣayʿī, the Rushaydah-Zalaf road crosses a small tributary of Wādī al-Shām called by the local Bedouins Umm al-Ǧathādir (its confluence with Wādī al-Shām is 1.5 km to the north-east). Site SESP.S is approximately 200 m north-north-east of site SESP.U on the same (right) bank of Umm al-Ǧathādir. It is a large cairn on top of the promontory (about 10 m above the wadi bed), overlooking the point at which the tributary wadi turns east, approximately 1 km before its confluence with Wādī al-Shām. This is site D in Macdonald, Al Muʾazzin & Nehmé 1996.

Commentary:
SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. In lightly scratched letters outside the cartouche between 12 and 14. The ʾl of grmʾl are in small letters just above the b of the following bn, and the ʿ of ʾnʿm is immediately above the n. Unfortunately, the letters after the ḫ of the final name are not visible on the photograph.

Commentary:
SESP.S 14 and 15 plus a rock drawing are on a narrow face adjacent to that bearing SESP.S 5–13. Given the presence of the personal name ms²ʿr in the genealogies in SESP.S 5, 9, 10, and 12,on the same stone as this text, it seems likely that some at least were members of a family known as the ʾl ms²ʿr.

Apparatus Criticus:
ShNGA 1:
Al-Jallad 2015: 281: [ḏ] ʾl ṣṭ "of the lineage of Ṣṭ" for ʾ- lṣt "The Bandit"
"of the lineage of [Ḍf} and ʿmrn of the lineage of Gʿbrtlh journeyed with his kinsfolk and Tmlh of the lineage of ʾṭ so may his kinsfolk be remembered" for "of the lineage of {Ḍf} and he was on a journey with his [two] kinsmen ʿmrn of the lineage of Gʿbr [and] tmlh of the lineage of ʾṭ and he remembered his relatives"

Commentary:
The word lṣṭ is found again in another inscription by the same author (Ali inscriptions 67) and in the a third on the same stone (Ali inscriptions 68) in both of which it appears as h- lṣṭ, as opposed to ʾ- lṣṭ here. So it is clear that it is a noun preceded by the definite article (on the different forms of the definite article in Safaitic see Al-Jallad 2015: 16–17) and it is interesting that the same author uses both the ʾ- and h- forms. Its occurrence between the author's patronym and his lineage would suggest that it is a title. The root L-Ṣ-Ṭ is not found in Semitic, but may be derived from Greek λῃστής "a bandit, brigand, or pirate". It is the word Josephus uses of the "brigands" of the Trachonitis (the modern Leǧaʾ) who were helped by the Nabataean king Obodas III and his minister Sylaeus (see Josephus Jewish Aniquities XVI 271–292). One could speculate that Ḥmlt bn S¹lm (here and in Ali inscriptions 67), and Ḥmlt bn ʾyṣn (in Ali inscriptions 68) were bandit leaders who took the Greek label as a title of pride, but there is of course no evidence for this, and we have no Safaitic inscriptions from the Leǧaʾ. If we are correct in restoring a [w] between ʿmrn ḏ- ʾl gʿbr and mlh ḏ- ʾl ʾṭ it would seem probable that the preceding rhṭ is in the dual. The diphthong ending marking the dual would not of course have been shown in Safaitic orthography.

By Mnʿm {son of} Khl of the lineage of {ʿḏʿ} of the lineage of Bʿr and he came to eight plentiful wells from the Ruḥbah at {the rising} {of Taurus} and so {Bʿls¹mn} [grant] relief from adversity to the Province

Commentary:
It is impossible to see more than a few of the letters on the photograph and so we are reliant on the hand copy for the text of this inscription. It is interesting that the author gives his lineage at two levels, ḏ ʾl ʿḏ{ʿ} ḏ- ʾl bʿr, which is unusual though not unknown in Safaitic inscriptions. The expression ṯmny {ʾ}nqʿt has not been found before in Safaitic, and this is the first occurrence of the number "eight" in these inscriptions. In Classical Arabic ʾnqʿt is the plural of naqīʿ "a well with a great deal of water" (Lisān 4526a). The emendation of the copy (nothing is visible at this point on the photograph) to b- {r}ʾy ʾ[ʾ]{l}{y} "the {rising} {of Taurus}" was suggested tentatively by A. Al-Jallad. For this expression see All-Jallad 2014: 216–217, 233; and in press, a. Note, however, that on the copy the letter read as r in {r}ʾy has no hooks, unlike all the other examples of r in the text. The "rising of Taurus" would be late April (Al-Jallad 2014: 218, Table 3). On mdnt possibly referring to the Roman provinces of Syria and/or Arabia, see Macdonald 2015: 154.

l {b}{l}ṣy bn mḥnn w wgm ʿl- frʾ

By {Blṣy} son of Mḥnn and he grieved for Frʾ

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 9: ṣy for {b}{l}ṣy; flh for frʾ

Commentary:
There are two letters at the beginning of the text which can be seen on the photograph and on Harding's copy but which are not reproduced in SIJ. Blṣy would be a new name but cf. Blṣt in C 1853. Similarly although the g of wgm has been excluded from the photograph it is present on Harding's original copy but was not reproduced in the copy in SIJ. The photograph shows that penultimate letter of the text has a short stroke at right angles to the stem and so should be read r. The final letter is clearly ʾ on both the phoptograph and Harding's copy.

l frʾ bn frq w tẓr ʿl---- s^2nʾ f h rḍ{w} flṭ

By Frʾ son of Frq and kept watch ---- enemies and so O {Rdw} [grant] deliverance

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ: l flh bn frd wt----

Commentary:
Most of the text is visible on the photograph with the exception of 3 or 4 letters after ʿl. The verb tẓr is normally folowed by a direct object so ʿl is unlikely to represent the preposition here and is more probably the beginning of a noun perhaps ʿlf = ʿdry fodderʾ. The l's and r's are well differentiated hence SIJ's reading of the first name is untenable.

By {Qn----} son of {ʾnʿm} is the young male camel

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 18: {h}{g}dl for ----dl

Commentary:
Winnett emends the second name to ʾnʿm and attributes the spelling in the copy to "copyist's error". Note that Harding's original copy of SIJ 3 also records ʿnʾm (the copy in SIJ has been altere) but here it is clear from the photograph that the original read ʾnʿm. Although SIJ does not mention a drawing the text strongly suggests that there must have been one.

By Ṭrṣ son of Bnklbt son of Mṭr son of Mʿz son of Fḍg and he went to get salt and so O Lt [grant] security and deliverance from distress this year.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 37: bn klbt for bn bnklbt; ʿhe journeyed' for ʿhe traded in salt'; bʾs^1 ʾs^{1}nt ʿ the danger of lanceheads' for bʾs^1 ʾ-s^{1}nt ʿdistress this year'.

Al-Jallad in press, a, Appendix 4: w mlḥ f h lt s^{1}lm w fṣyt m- bʾs^1 ʾ- s^{1}nt "and Aquarius appeared (rose ?) and so O Lt may he be secure and may this year bring deliverance from misfortune".

Commentary:
All the letters are clear. The verb malaḥ is still used among the Bedouin of ḥarrah for going to buy salt from the villages of the northern Wādī al-Sirḥān or those of the Ǧabal al-ʿArab (pers. comm.and see Denizeau 1960: 502). The ʾ before s^{1}nt is clear on the photograph and may represent one of the forms of the definite article in Safaitic (see Al-Jallad 2015: 74–76), i.e. "this year". On the other hand, ʾs^{1}nt could be the equivalent of Ar. isnāt the maṣdar of asnata (Lane p. 1440c) both meaning ʿto experience drought'.

Commentary:
Winnet reads w wgm etc. with SIJ 53. However this passge follows immediately after the genealogy of SIJ 51 and though in smaller letters is in the same type of script. By contrast not only is there a gap between the last name of SIJ 53 and w wgm etc. but the two are in different hands.

Commentary:
The reading on the photograph is absolutely clear and so rendering unnecessary the emendations proposed by Milik (1960: 179) and Jamme (1968: 67; 1970: 116). The k of s¹krn has been turned into a d by the addition of a small stroke which is more shallowly cut than the rest of the letter.

Commentary:
The second letter is invisible on the photograph and could be m or g on Harding's copy. The third name is clearly ġṯṯ on the photograph. Winnett read ḥrb(t) because Harding's original copy has ḥrbh though this passage is only partly visible on the published version. However the t is clear on the photograph with a small much shallower line above it which is what confused Harding.

l ʾnʿm bn khl bn [[]]bġḍ

By ʾnʿm son of Khl son of {Bġḍ}

Apparatus Criticus:
JSafN 27 note 1 (mistaking this for SIJ 70): ġyr for khl; mbġḍ for [[]]bġḍ

Commentary:
This text is beside SIJ 71 (see SIJ pl. I photo A. 1893). The author appears to have written and then erased a letter (probably ġ) before the beginning of the last name. The content of the text is identical (apart from the erasure) with that of SIJ 70 which is on a different rock next to SIJ 69 (see photo Winn H5 II/19).

By S¹ʿd son of Mty and he grieved for Ṣʿd

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 72: ʿm f (ʿ)m at the end.

Commentary:
The text is lightly scratched next to SIJ 70. There is no sign of the phrase ʿm f ʿm either on the photograph or on Harding's copy and it seems probable that Thompson's copy T48a (in which it appears) is of another inscription.

---- nṣb

Apparatus Criticus:
JSafN p. 65 note 75: ----t nṣb

Commentary:
There is a chip immediately before nṣb. The mark read as t by Jamme is just below the lām auctoris of SIJ 74 and is tiny in proportion to the rest of the text. It seems unlikely that it belongs to this inscription and is probably an extraneous mark.

l khl bn bġḍ

By Khl son of Bġḍ

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 76: takes SIJ 76.1 as line 2 of this text reading bġmdnrwdr

Commentary:
There seems no reason to take SIJ 76.1 as part of this text. There are short lightly scratched lines immediately after each of the l's but their technique is quite different from that of the rest of the text and they are certainly extraneous to it.

l ġmdn b[n] wdʿl

By Ġmdn {son of} Wdʿl

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 76 reads this with that text as bġmdnrwdr

Commentary:
The letter-forms of this text are quite different from those of SIJ 76 (most strikingly ġ but see also r and l). Winnett reads the first and last letters as b and l respectively but they are simply hooked l's. There is no trace of a n after the b and it is tempting to suggest that the author wrote nb for bn. However both the names ġmd and ġmdn are attested, so this can be no more than a hypothesis.

Commentary:
The penultimate letter is badly misrepresented on Morton's copy. On the photograph it is a vertical line with the shallowest of curves and with half-way down a slight protrusion to the left. The final letter is not visible on the photograph but the sign on the copy looks like a form of ṭ.

By Ghm son of ʾfdt son of {Rbʿ} son of {ʾrb----}

Commentary:
The fork of the h is crossed by a line of lighter patina. The letters r b in the last two names are joined by proximity making them look like a m. But in both cases the semi-circle of the b protrudes beyond the hooks of the r. After the ʾ the text runs onto a different surface and the letters do not show up well. There seems to be one more letter after the b of the last name.

By Flṭt son of Tm son of Flṭt son of Tm and he was devastated by grief for ʾnʿm his brother who had perished and for S¹ʿd the son of his maternal uncle {ʾḥḍ} ---- and O Lt [grant] retribution

Commentary:
The passage bn tm w ndm is on an adjacent face and cannot be seen on the photograph. After ʾḥ there is at least one letter (read by Winnett as d) on the same line and an unknown number of letters on the line below. Winnett read the last of these as r s¹ but though r is a plausible reading on the photograph it is difficult to see the s¹.

Commentary:
This text and 104.2 and 104.3 are written over two faces of the same rock which bears SIJ 105–106. Unfortunately only one face was copied and photographed. The present text starts in large letters on the visible face. The passage from ḏ- 'l to bṭ which is in small letters below it may be the end of the same text or of another which starts on the hidden face. By Ḫlṣ son of Bny son of ʾs¹ son of Ṣʿd son of {Ys¹mʿl} and O Lt [grant] security {and} rest

Commentary:
As noted by Winnett, the s¹ of ys¹mʿl is not visible on the photograph, though there is space for it, but was present on Thompson's (unpublished) copy, though not on Morton's (published) copy. Since Thompson did not know the Safaitic script (SIJ p. 3) it is unlikely that he would have made an unconscious correction in his copy and it is probable that the s¹ was just visible on the stone even though it does not show up on the photograph. On the photograph the w before rḥ appears to have no cross-stroke.

The initial letter of the second name is difficult to make out on the photograph but is clear not ʿn, as read by Winnett, and could possibly be a g with one straight side. l ʾb bn ṣbḥ w h yṯʿ rwḥ grm

By ʾb son of Ṣbḥ and O Yṯʿ [grant] relief from a misdeed

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 123: glm for grm.

Commentary:
The word rwḥ here could be related to the Classical Arabic maṣdar of the 1st (faʿala) form verb from the root R-W-Ḥ, in the sense of "experiencing relief from grief or sorrow after suffering from it" (Lane p. 1178a and see 1182a). Winnett read the last word as glm comparing Classical Arabic ǧalmah/ǧulmah "the whole (of a thing)". However, this demands a construction which is difficult to explain syntactically. The reading grm is suggested here tentatively (cf. the r in rwḥ) with the meaning of a "misdeed or crime" (cf. Classical Arabic gurm "a sin, a crime, an offence", Lane p. 413a).

l {ʾ}ḥs¹n bn s¹ḫb bn ḏʿẓr w rdf mw b- rʾy ʿqbt

By ʾḥs¹n son of S¹ḫb son of Ḏʿẓr and he followed [i.e. sought for?] water during the rising of Scorpio

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 124: ḏfy bn s¹ḫr for s¹ḫb bn ḏʿẓr; mw for m wn.
JVR p. 36: mwn for m wn; b- rʾy ʿqbt "in sight of ʿqbt".
WH comm. 1016: b- rʾy ʿqbt "within sight of ʿqbt"
Al-Jallad (in press, a): w rdf mwn b- rʾy ʿqbt "and he followed [the animals] experiencing much fatigue during the rising of Scorpio"

Commentary:
The text is enclosed in a cartouche. The first name is written vertically and the text then splits with bn + a name running to the left and another bn + name running to the right. The statement of the text is enclosed between these two and the edge of the cartouche. It is impossible to be sure which of these names is that of the father and which of the grandfather. It could even be a joint inscription by two individuals called ʾḥs¹n with different fathers, though the peculiarities of the letter-forms suggest that it was written by only one person. We have placed the names in the above order simply because ḏʿẓr is followed by the w of the statement. One fork of the second letter appears to have merged the preceding l. The third letter of *s¹ḫ*b (read as r by Winnett) is like the other b's in the text and quite different from the the r's. There is a clear ʿ after the ḏ of ḏʿẓr and the third letter, read as f by Winnett, is quite different from the f of rdf. The next sign cannot be a y (as read by Winnett) and is a straight line with a slight curve at one end like the r's in the rest of the text. Note that an addition has been made to the base of the r of rdf (which could thus be a ġ) and that the r of rʾy is clear on the photograph even though marked as uncertain by Winnett. After rdf mw there is no n (as read by Jamme and Al-Jallad). There is a small dot between the w and the b, but in this inscription a dot represents ʿ while n is represented by a clear line. The dot here is smaller than the other examples in the text and it seems likely that it is extraneous to the inscription. We have tentatively taken mw as an alternative form of the more usual my meaning "water" (compare C 1679). We follow Al-Jallad 2016: 102–103 in his interpretation of the phrase b rʾy ʿqbt.

By {Ġyrʾl}

Apparatus Criticus:
JMAA VII p. 129 n. 52: l ġylʾl h lt ḏkrt rṣw "By Ġylʾl. O Lt may she remember Rṣw"

Commentary:
The text is very lightly scratched between the first two names of SIJ 125 and the edge of the cartouche. It is invisible on the published plate (SIJ Pl. III) and is difficult to make out on the photograph. There seems to be nothing to justify Jamme's reading rṣw at the end, and his combination of the vocative with the optative perfect is grammatically impossible.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 130: 'ḥlm b{n] {m}{n}'l for 'ḥlm {b}{n} {r}{b}{n} {b}{n} {m}{n}'l

Commentary:
The text between the last two letters of 'ḥlm and the the last two of mn'l is carved on an adjacent face which is in shadow on the photograph. In this section, it is just possible to make out {b}{n} {r}{b}{n} {b}{n} {m}{n}, the section of the genealogy which HaNSB 200, HAUI 36, and C 3217 suggest should be in this position.

Commentary:
Additions have been made to most of the first fifteen letters of the inscription to make them into other letters and two additional signs have been added before the låm auctoris. The altered text reads ls¹lmmdmqdmṣ'mzmd. The fourth name has been partially obscured by later hammering and it is not clear whether it too has been altered though one line of the m is appreciably broader than the rest of the letter.

Commentary:
The text must have been carved after SIJ 133 since it is so placed as to avoid it. There is an extraneous vertical line between the ' and s² of 's²rq. The f of the first ḍf has the shape of a capital "Z" but the normal form in the second example.

l drʾl bn hḏr w wgd s¹fr (ʾ)nʿm f wg[ʿ]

By Drʾl son of Hḏr and he found the inscription of {ʾnʿm} and {so} he lamented for [him]

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 168: h- nʿm or (ʾ)nʿm for {ʾ}nʿm; f wm for f wg[ʿ]

Commentary:
The text as copied by Thmpson is visible on the pohotograph as far as s¹f but unless it continues on an adjacent face it is difficult to see where he found the last eight letters. SIJ 169 is immediately below this text but the presence of a lām auctoris makes it difficult to take it as the continuation of 168 and anyway Thompson clearly saw something else. The sloping stem of the first letter of {ʾ}nʿm suggests that it is an ʾ of which the copyist has missed one of the side-strokes.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 172: gmḥy for {w}m{ḥ}{y}; ḥrb kbr for ḥrb f ḥrb.

Commentary:
The third name is very unclear on the pohotograph. The ʿ of ʿl can be seen on the photograph to be a circle similar to the third letter and not a dot as in Thompson's copy. The antepenultimate letter is clearly a ḥ on the photograph and it is followed by a hooked r. Winnet ignores the f after the first ḥrb.

Commentary:
There is no sign of the w which Jamme reads at the end of the first name. Commentary:
Although it is not certain it is probable that the letters wʿldtm belong to SIJ 227.1 as proposed by Clark. Their position and the square w which they share with that text support this and Jamme's claim (JMAA XIII p. 23-24) that the form of the m is closer to the forms in SIJ 227 than in 217.1 woulkd be impossible to establish since the letter read as m in the latter is a partial restoration!

l m(----)wr bn hf bn (ʾ)ṯʿ

By {M----Wr} son of Hf son of {ʾṯʿ}

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 270: yṯʿ for (ʾ)ṯʿ.

Commentary:
In Harding's copy the last name is ṣṯʿ where the ṣ almost certainly represents an original ʾ with one of the forks closed by a later addition. However when the copy was transposed to SIJ this letter was turned into a y. Winnett notes that "in No. 253 the last name is spelt ʾṮʿ."

Commentary:
Although Harding's copy is incomplete it seems certain that this is one text. There is a space on the copy between the ḥ and the y of the 6th name but the family tree under WH 1026 suggests that nothing has been lost and that the name is ḥy. The final name is clearly wʾb on Harding's copy of this text and of SIJ 277 278. The second letter is also ʾ in WH 1033 and LP 22. Only in WH 930 and LP 21 does it appear as h. All these texts are known only from copies. Given that 4 of the 6 texts have ʾit seems probable that the name is wʾb not whb.

l wdmʾl bn trṣ bn ʾs^1 bn hʾ{b} w s^{2}ty {w} {w}l{d} s^{1}nt mrd gḥrb {h-} s^{1}l{ṭ}n

By Wdmʾl son of Trṣ son of ʾs^1 son of {Hʾb} and he spent the winter [here] {and} {helped [the animals] give birth} the year Gḥrb revolted against {the} government

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 281:(h-) wr(d) for {w} {w}l{d}; mḥrb for gḥrb.

Commentary:
The last letter of the fourth name has been hammered over and looks at first sight like a k. However the projecting straight line may not be part of the original letter and what is left looks like a b, rather than a r. The second word of the statement is exceptionally carelessly written even by the standards of this text. The sign after the y of s^{2}ty cannot be resolved into h- w as in Winnett's reading. It seems to have been written originally as a ṭ and the tops of the verticals have been joined to make what can only be a w. The next letter is also a w though of a quite different shape and the sign after that cannot be a r as read by Winnett and Jamme since it is a simple vertical line with no hooks. The final letter of the word is also doubtful but d seems the most likely reading. It is difficult to read the large elipse immediately after mrd as a m (compare the m of mrd) and it must be a g. Although sense would seem to demand a h- before s^{1}lṭn the letter looks more like a k. Finally the ṭ of s^{1}lṭn lacks one vertical. There are three or four letters some of which are partially obliterated by later hammering in the space between trṣ and s^{2}ty.

By Ḫr son of ʾs¹ son of Ḫr of the tribe of Ms¹kt. He was born in this place [Jawa] the year of the rebellion of Mḥrb and the year of the rebellion of Dmṣy. He is on the watch for the enemy, so, o Lt and Ds²r. [grant] security and [continued] existence.

Apparatus Criticus:
SadF p. 45: w ḫrṣ h- s²nʾ - wa quṭiʿa dæbir al-ʿudºw; mwgd - ġinan/ẓafar

Commentary:
The first letter of mḥrb is clearly m here (cf. SIJ 281). Mwgd could be the equivalent of Ar. mawāǧid (pl. of māǧd) "abundances"? In the Safaitic inscriptions the verb wld is usually used in a transitive sense equivalent to the Ar. II Form meaning "to birth" i.e. "to help an animal (usually goats) to give birth". This was clearly an important annual event since far more texts recording birthing are dated than texts any other happenings. Interestingly many of the dates of birthings refer to political events in the settled areas. There are occasional texts where an event is dated by reference to two occurrences but in these cases the formula is always s¹nt kaḏā w kaḏā not s¹nt kaḏa w s¹nt kaḏa. Up to mḥrb the text is carved in large chiselled letters but from mḥrb onwards the letters are much smaller and are lightly incised. This together with the highly unusual dating construction suggests that thethe author wrote the first part on the occasion of the birthing at Jawa one year and added to it when he returned another year for the same purpose.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 288 and 289 read separately. Bdrl for Bdbl; s¹lmt for nẓmt; ktmh for kʿmh; nhg for {ẓ}w{ġ}{m}; wd{ṯ}{ʾ}{h}{w} r{d}---- for w dṯʾ {h} ʿrḍ ----ʾmlḥ; mrd for ʿnd; h- ḫṭ for for h-tll. MRSIJ p. 180: Read as one text; w ʾmlḥ

Commentary:
The published facsimile is an incomplete and inaccurate rendering of Harding's hand-copy. The fourth name can be seen to be nẓmt on the photograph. The seventh is not entirely clear on the photograph but is closer to the kʿmh of Harding's original copy than to Winnett's reading ktmh. The ninth is extremely difficult and the eleventh is impossible to read on the photograph. For the statement Harding's copy has wdʾhbʿrḍtʾfhrʾmḥl but on the photograph this looks more like w dṯʾ {h} ʿrḍ. The letters immediately after this are impossible to read on the photograph with any certainty but the final signs before the invocation are certainly ʾmlḥ not ʾmḥl.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 298: l ʿbd to ḥnnʾl. SIJ 300: the rest; bn ʾmr bn ṯys^{2}t for bn ----[----]

Commentary:
Probably a longer version of the genealogy which occurs in SIJ 681. The first two gaps in the text are the result of the growth of lichen over the face. On the photograph it is impossible to see anything under the first but there would be sufficient room for bn ns^{2}ʿʾl bn nẓmʾl as in SIJ 681 in which the latter is followed by bn ʾʾmr. Immediately after first gap there is what looks like a bn followed by some illegible signs which seem to be those which appear as ʾmr on the facsimile in SIJ. From what is visible on the photograph this reading is impossible and it should be noted that on the published facsimile these letters have been misplaced immediately before bn ṯys^{2}t whereas in fact the second patch of lichen under which there would be room for at least one name intervenes. The third gap is the result of deliberate scratching over.

l kyn bn mnʿm

By Kyn son of Mnʿm

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 306: k(h)l for kyn

Commentary:
Harding's copy clearly reads kyn and the last letter is the same length as the n of bn and only slightly longer than that of mnʿm though this is not reproduced in the facsimile published in SIJ. Cf SIJ 431 which is almost certainly by the same author. Jamme's claim that 306 and 431 are two copies of the same text is rendered unlikely by the fact that the side stroke of the k protrudes from the lower part of the semi-circle in 306 and from the upper part in 431.

Apparatus Criticus:

Commentary:

By S^{2}mt son of ʾṯr son of Ẓṯ son of Grm

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 346: (y)ṯ[ʿ] for {r}{ġ}ṯ.

Commentary:
the shapes of the letters in Harding's copy have not been accurately represent in SIJ. The first letter of the third name is like the r of ʾṯr except that it has only one "hook". The next sign is a diagonal line which does not touch the previous letter. There is no ʿ. Similarly the penultimate letter is much closer to the r of ʾṯr in hArding's copy than in SIJ's facsimile.

l ʾnʿm bn ʿbd ḏ- ʾl ḥẓy w ṣ---- {w} h lt s^{1}lm

By ʾnʿm son of ʿbd of the lineage of Ḥẓy

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 349: ends at ḥẓy reads f h lt s^1lm with 350.

Commentary:
Ḥẓy is clear on the photograph. The w introducing the sentence and prayer is immediately after the y of the ḥẓy of this text and some way from the the second name of SIJ 350. It therefore seems more likely that it belongs to this text rather than to 350 with which SIJ reads it.

l $s^{2ʿ}$ bn qmr bn $s^{2ʿ}$ bn ʾs^1 bn zhr w nfr mn rm w ts^2wq l- ʾẖwn -h l- mdbr

By $S^{2ʿ}$ son of Qmr son of $S^{2ʿ}$ son of ʾs^1 son of Zhr and he escaped from Rm [the Romans] and he longed for his brothers who were in the inner desert

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 352: qml for qmr; l- ʾḫ wlh "for a brother grieving" for l- ʾḫwn -h. MNH p. 329 and n. 172: on w nfr mn rm - and he escaped from Rm.

Commentary:
The last letter of the second name is clearly a r on the photographs. The spaces between bn and zhr and between the z and the h of zhr are due to holes in the rock. Despite Jamme's claims to the contrary the f of nfr is absolutely clear on the photograph (A. 1812) used on SIJ Pl. V. Note that ts^{2}wq here is followed by l- rather than the usual ʾl-. The lower parts of the strokes of the ḫ have been overscored and the left-hand one has been used as the lām of allāh in the Kufic inscription (Baramki 1964 (BNAS) p. 331 no. 8) below. Similarly the n of ʾḫwn has been lengthened to make the second lām of allāh. The difference in patina-colour between the original n and the extension can be seen on the photograph (A. 1812). The final phrase l- mdbr is curious but cannot be read in any other way. Presumably his brothers were in the inner desert.

l mġny bn zbd w s^{2}ṭr f h lt ḥnn

By Mġny son of Zbd and he was cross-eyed. So, O Lt, (have) pity

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 353: mfny for mġny; ḥ{n}{n} for ḥnn.

Commentary:
The text is written vertically on a rock face and below line 2 there is the beginning of a Kufic graffito not published in Baramki 1964 (BNAS). Comparison of the third letter with the f introducing the prayer shows that the former cannot be a f and must be a ġ. The n's of ḥnn are clear on the photograph used for SIJ Pl. V and it is not clear why Winnett marked them as uncertain.

l ʿmr bn g{r}m

By ʿmr son of {Grm}

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 360 read only ʿẓm for g{r}m.

Commentary:
The beginning of the text was cut by the edge of Winnett's photograph, which is probably why he read only the last name. There is a small mark to the left of the top of the r in the second name, but this is thinner than the line of the rest of the letter and is probably extraneous. There are no letters between the final m and the apparent w behind the she-ass and the latter may be part of the drawing.

Commentary:
The letter after gyz is not clear on the photograph but does not seem to have a cross-stroke which is presumably why Winnett marked his w as doubtful. It seems more liekly that it is a bn in which the b and n have been joined as is very comon.

l wdm bn ḫlq w rʿy f h {r}{ḍ}w {ġ}yr

By Wdm son of Ḫlq and he tended the flocks in the leja and provided (them) with food

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 463: rʿy for bʿy; f h- lg w myr for f h {r}{ḍ}w {ġ}yr
By Wdm son of Ḫlq and he tended the flocks in the leja and provided (them) with food

Commentary:
Comparison with the b of bn and the final letter shows that the first word of the sentence must be bʿy. The antepenultimate letter would be back-to-front if it is a m and is more likely to have been a ġ of the doubled variety. Al-Jallad: By Wdm son of Ḫ lq and {he pastured} so, O {Rḍw}, {provide provisions}! (2015: 281).

l ḍfʿt bn mnʾl

By Ḍfʿt son of Mnʾl

Commentary:
The photograph shows both that the copy in SIJ is inaccurate and that Winnett's reading is correct. Both the lām auctoris and the final letter have a slight curve at one end and are clearly l's and the fourth letter is a clear ʿ not w. The dot shown on the copy at the end of the text is a stray mark.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 516: blqt byḥs[1] for blq {h-} ----; reads SIJ 516.1 as the continuation of 516.

Commentary:
The photograph was taken from an oblique angle and so is not entirely clear. The l of {k}hl has a generous curve at one end as do the other l's in the text the sign just before the unreadable letters looks identical to the first letter of theinscriptions and should probably therefore be read h.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 516: read as the continuation of SIJ 516: ʾlm rġm "pain he disliked" JSRM p. 348: read as part of SIJ 516.

Commentary:
The technique of this text is quite differnt from that of SIJ 516 and there seem no reason to suppose that the two belong together. The ʾ marked with a question mark on the copy in SIJ can be seen to be on the photograph to be a series of small abrsions unconnected with the text.

l s^{2}r bn s^{2}dy

By S^{2}r son of S^{2}dy

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 542: s^{2}l for s^{2}r.

Commentary:
The third letter has a short horizontal stroke at one end unlike the lām auctoris. On the other hand given that this text is in the same cartouche as SIJ 541 Winnett's suggestion that the author of 542 was the father of the author of 541 cannot be ruled out in which case the name may be [n]s^{2}l or [n]s^{2}r.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 613: [l] [k]s¹ṭ for (----)s¹ṭ; dmʿs² for dm()s².

Commentary:
ʿ with a dot in the middle is found from time to time and should be distinguished from the sign of two concentric circles which is an occasional alternative form of ḍ. However if the circle with a dot represents ʿ it seems unlikely that the dot before the final letter can also represent it in the same text and the latter is probably an extraneous mark.

Commentary:
The first name is clearly ms¹k on the photograph and the letter-forms are almost iden⍰tical to those of the third name. The letters at the end of the text which were not read by Winnett appear to read w fty -h "and his slave". SIJ 673.3

Apparatus Criticus:
JSafN p. 53 note 48: reads some of the letters as SIJ 674bis: l ṣlmm bn rnyf.

Commentary:
A large number of lightly scratched letters which cover most of the face and probably represent a number of different texts all of which were ignored by SIJ. Unfortunately the photographs (A. 1917 1918) are not clear enough to make any coherent reading possible. JSafN p. 53 note 48 read what he could see of a few of these letters on SIJ Pl. V as SIJ 674.1. However his reading is not borne out by the photograph.

Commentary:
The first two names are more or less clear on the photographs and Winnett's readings are impossible. The third name seems to consist of 4 letters but it is difficult to read any of them with confidence. See E.M. Smallwood "The Jews under Roman rule" (Leiden 1981) p. 96-97 for a discussion). Note the expression prosdokías toû laoû ʾIoudaíwv ("the expectation of the people of the Jews") in Acts 12.11 is not an equivalent to ʾl Yhd since here it almost certainly refers to 'the people' (the crowd as opposed to their leaders as it does in 12.4 to which it refers back.

---- S¹ʾr son of Ṯbrt and he found the inscription of his father [and] he grieved [for him]. So O Lt [grant] vengeance

Commentary:
Note that SIJ 704.1 (the text mentioned in the commentary to SIJ 704 as being too faint to read) is enclosed in the same cartouche with 702 (by this author's brother) and 704 (the text by his father which he mentions finding). However since the last two letters of 704.1 crosse the edge of the cartouch it seems probable that it was originally drawn to enclose 704 and 702 and that 704.1 was squeezed in when the author found the texts.

l ẓnʾl bn s²bʿn w {b}{ġ}y ---- ms¹rt

By Ẓnʾl son of S²bʿn and he soughted ---- to the camp

Apparatus Criticus:
JSafN p. 91 note 157: w s¹yb gs¹rt for w {b}{ġ}y ---- ms¹rt.

Commentary:
One letter has been scratched over between the y and the m. Jamme suggests that this text predates 748.2 asnd that it was for this reason that the t at the end of the latter was placed between the arms of the m. However see the n of bn in the same text.

l rbʿt bn fṣʿ w nẓr h- ḥrf

By Rbʿt son of Fṣʿ and he guarded the mountain top

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 752: "and he was on the look-out for the comrades" for "he guarded the mountain-top"

Commentary:
Ḥrf could be the equivalent of Ar. ḥarf "sharp summit ledge [of a mountain]" (see Lane 550a) which would be appropriate for Tell al-ʿAbd where this inscription was found. Nẓr would then mean "he kept watch guarded" (cf. Syr. nṭr)

[h] rḍw s^{1}ʿd ẓyʾ ʿn- wn bn tḥwr

{O} Rḍw help Ẓyʾ ʿnwn son of Tḥwr

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 779: ʿlwn bn tḏr w for ʿn- wn bn tḥwr; reads SIJ 779.2 as the end of this text.

Commentary:
The restoration of the initial vocative particle seems certain. The ʿ has been split by a crack in the rock but cannot be anything else (cf. bn later in the text). The next letter is no different from the n of bn and so the preposition must be ʿn- "against". The direction of the r suggests that the w precedes it hence tḥwr. There is no connection between this text and SIJ 779.2.

l ys^{1}ʿd bn qnt<<>>

By Ys^{1}ʿd son of Qnt

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 779: reads as the end of 779.1: s^{1}ʿd bn qnt.

Commentary:
The first complete letter on the photograph is y and there are traces of a vertical stroke before it. Although this letter is clipped by the edge of the photograph it is clear that the edge of the stone is so close that there would be no room for any letters before this vertical stroke. Thus h rḍy or h nhy are ruled out as restorations and this stroke can only be the lām auctoris. There is what appears to be a diagonal stroke at the end of the text which does not seem to be a letter. If it is then the last name would be qntn.

l d----

By D

Apparatus Criticus:
JMAA VII p. 133 n. 77 (as SIJ 783b): [----]h bn wldl.

Commentary:
These are the scratched letters above the end of SIJ 783. They are mainly obscured by large wasm which Jamme takes as another text (his "SIJ 783a" which he reads: l lb). What can be seen of the letters under the wasm suggests that the text runs in the opposite direction to that in which Jamme reads it.

Commentary:
On a face adjacent to that bearing SIJ 786-788. Not read by SIJ. This the only Safaitic inscription known so far which mentions the annual migration both to and from the inner desert (on which see Macdonald 1992: 6, and n. 28). The vast majority of references are to the migration to the inner desert (ʾs²rq). For the translation of qbll see Al-Jallad 2015: 333.

By Mrhn son of ʿlb and he stopped at this empty area and he followed the traces .... of the lineage of ʿmrt

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 789: only qṣṣ read. JSafN p. 48 note 41: l mrhn bn ʿql w gls¹ bḫl qṣṣ.

Commentary:
The surface of the stone has been covered with later scorings and hammerings which have obscured parts of this text which is elegantly written in the semi- square script. B and r are carefully distinguished the former having a square form and the latter being rounded. The circles of the letters ʿ w g q ṣ are carefully drawn an this suggests that the fourth letter is probably a h rather than a y despite the fact that the prongs of the fork appear to be joined. Similarly the second letter of the patronym cannot be q as read by Jamme (cf. the large circle of the q of qṣṣ). Only one letter is obscured after bʿ and while in the context it is probably a d it is impossible to be sure. There are numerous lightly scratched letters on the same face but no coherent reading can be made from the photograph.

By S¹bl son of Dms¹n son of Ġny son of ʾs¹mnt son of Zʿkrt and he camped [here] and he longed

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 818: ġny[m] for ġny.

Commentary:
The copy in SIJ shows a square after ġny which Winnett takes as a m. But there is no sign of this on the photograph. There isa long wavy line between the ʾ and s¹ of ʾsmnt and a dot between the z and ʿ of zʿkrt.

SIJ 825

l s²gʾ bn ṣhb bn rġḍ bn ʾḥlm h rḍy nqmt m- lkm {b}n ṯb gr -h w ʿwr ḏ- yʿwr h- s¹fr

By S²gʾ son of Ṣhb son of Rġḍ son of ʾḥlm O Rḍy [grant] revenge on Lkm son of Ṯb his neighbour and blind whoever scratches out the inscription

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 825: bġd for rġḍ; rḍy for h rḍy; mn km ġnṯ bʿr -h for m- lkm {b}n ṯb gr -h; reads w ʿwr (ḏ-) (y)ʿ[w][r] (h) [s¹][f][r] as part of SIJ 826 for w ʿwr ḏ- yʿwr h- s¹fr.

Commentary:
The entire text is absolutely clear on the photograph. The letters b and r are clearly distinguished so the third name can only be rġḍ. The letters ʾ l and h in ʾḥlm h rḍy are lightly scratched but their position in relation to the other letters makes it highly probable that they are original. Thompson's copy omitted the h before rḍy. The letter following the m after nqmt is clearly a l not a n. A diagonal line has been added to the b of the following bn making it look like a ġ. SIJ takes the curse as part of 826 but its position and the quite different form of r in 826 make this impossible. The author omitted the ʿwr of yʿwr and squeezed in the ʿ between the ḏ and the following h and added the wr below. The s¹ and the bottom of the r of s¹fr have been hammered over but are still visible on the photograph.

Provenance:
Tell al-ʿAbd, unspecified region, unspecified country.

By Ẓn son of S¹krn son of Ġṯ

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 826: does not read the last name; reads the curse in 825 with this text.

Commentary:
This text must be later than 825 because it is squeezed in between the two lines of the latyter and even avoids the added letters in yʿ +wr +. Note the form of the r with hooks is different from the r's in 825.

Provenance:

Commentary:
For b- rʾy gml see LP 435-436 [L67 68 70]. The name (whether a place-name or a description) would be appropriate to the meaning of ṣyr.

Commentary:
The text begins vertically to the left of SIJ Extra 24 cuts across the end of 24 and then doubles back and runs diagonally across the left side of the face. It seems to continue vertically after ngy. The second letter has been altered from ' to ṣ. The middle letters of this name have been rendered illegible. The ' of ḏ- 'l in 24 has been written between the arms of the r of 25 suggesting that 25 must have been written first. The b of the third bn has ben written inside the arms of the final b of 'ḥbb. l mġyr bn zyd bn ʾrs² w bny ʿl- bn -h w ʿlf

By Mġyr son of Zyd son of ʾrs² and he built for his son and fed [the animals]

Apparatus Criticus:
SIT: ʾl{f} for ʾrs². SIAM II p. 194: read ʾrs² for third name and it is uncertain whether the last four letters belong to the text. JMAA VIII p. 3: ʾlġ for ʾl{f}. JMAA XIII p. 196-197: ʾrs² for ʾl{f}; reads the last four letters as a separate text in the opposite direction to that in which they were read by SIT: fkʿw a proper name "Fkʿw".

Commentary:
The s² has a vertical stroke with an arm at right angles at one end and a curve at the other. The last four letters have thicker carelessly hammered lines. Whilst SIAM II and JMAA XIII might be correct in suggesting that they are a separate text it is perhaps more likely that they do belong to this text and have been subsequently hammered over.
