Appendix 1. Description of Survey Questionnaire

The questionnaire was divided into five sections: 1) date, frequency and type of participation; 2) mobilisation factors (who, if anyone, did the protesters come with?, how did they find out where to go to protest, and what sources of information did they use more broadly?); 3) key claims and demands of the protesters; 4) past political engagement in elections, protests, and membership in organisations and parties; and 5) demographic/biographic information about the respondents (gender, ethnicity, language use, and religion). The questions about a respondent's mother tongue in conjunction with questions about language use at work and in private mark a departure from the simplifications of linguistic issues in existing surveys of the Ukrainian population at large. ### Appendix 2. Description of rapid interview questions asked

Three primary questions were asked: (1) Why are you here today?; (2) Why did you decide to protest?; (3) Why is your participation in the protests important? Two secondary questions were asked, time permitting: (4) Who did you come with?; and (5) What source of information did you use to find out about the protest?
