

Two sentence summary

This study shows across the menopause transition there are changes seen in body fat distribution towards a more android like distribution alongside a worsening in cardiovascular risk factors across this same time period. However, it appears that the changes in CVD risk factors are not attributed to any significant degree to body composition changes but more likely a result of qualitative and functional change in metabolic organs.