Miner

"I come from a family of coalminers and after leaving school I followed my dad into the pits and worked in the pits in Nottinghamshire for 10 years.

After leaving the pits I volunteered at the local Citizens Advice Bureau (Ashfield and Broxtowe) where I stayed for 10 years. I then went on to work in hostels for homeless care leavers, and then to the local MPs office for 5 years."

Jockey

"Freeman has written about how his politics has been shaped by his early life experience of a broken home and family turmoil. Born to jump jockey Arthur Freeman and debutante Joanna Philipson in 1967, his parents divorced soon after he was born and he had no contact with his father until he reached adulthood, growing up as a ward of court. A campaigner for NACOA and child stammerers, Freeman has spoken powerfully about how his experiences as a child career of his then alcoholic mother with an absent father shaped his core Conservative values of the responsibility of privilege."

Yes	Working class	"As a mixed race daughter of an immigrant with working class roots, I understand the strengths and needs of a diverse community like Luton North. Like many immigrants, my mother came here to work in the NHS. I will continue to be a strong advocate for the benefits of immigration in our communities and the need for integration."

"My parents divorced when I was 7 years old and I was brought up primarily by my mum - my dad died a few years later. As many people in that situation know, life in a single parent family can be financially tough. My mum worked in a range of jobs, including catering and selling insurance, later studying for a degree in social work and becoming a social worker. I think that was when the importance of hard work, self-sufficiency, determination and education really hit me and her example has greatly influenced my approach to life."

The family were known for their philanthropic work, establishing schools in Nottinghamshire as well as recognising union representation in the family coal mines as far back as the late 19th century. On the Island, they established a library service and Reading Rooms, built housing for the rural poor and helped to establish a lifeboat service along the southwest coast of the Island. The family's wealth was whittled away during the 20th century."

"Before becoming the Member of Parliament for Bosworth in 2019, I was a GP across the Midlands. I believe there are a lot of similarities between a good local MP and a good GP – you have to communicate clearly and effectively, you have to be able to deal with complex information and make decisions, and you have to problem solve. Above all, however, you have to care about the people you look after, and work hard to earn their respect.

Having grown up in rural Dorset, where my father worked as a GP and my mother worked first as a nurse, and then a school nurse, discussions around medicine were a common theme in our house from an early age! Through their work, both of my parents were dedicated to wanting to help people, and ~~show that yourself and institution~~

"The catalyst for returning to being active in local politics was the Darlington Labour party planning to close the Crown Street library, something which as a father to a daughter who was an incessant reader as a child, I did not want to see happen. I felt that the local Labour party were not listening to public mood, it was clearly a very unpopular decision that they had taken. As an accountant I certainly felt the library had the potential to become financially stable and provide an essential service to the people of Darlington and was something I worked very hard to achieve."

"For a few years, almost all of my limited spare time was taken up with helping to save Heart of Midlothian Football Club as Chair of the supporters' coop, Foundation of Hearts. I always knew this was going to be a tough task but I've been a fan since I was lifted over the turnstiles in the 1980s. Seeing tens of thousands of people watching every week and the club now being on the road to safety makes it all worthwhile. The overriding conclusion seems to be that supporters feel they have their club back again. It's important for the city, for local communities and for everyone who likes sport to maintain our historic institutions. I'm delighted other footballing institutions are now looking at this as a model for the future I'm sure every supporter, regardless of what team they support, will know how important that team is to them and the wider
