Highlights

- We investigated local school closures and child and parent mental health in Japan.
- Our sample comprises Japanese parents who filled in an online nationwide survey.
- School closures were associated with increased child and parent mental health.
- Support to mitigate the potential mental health impacts on families is needed.